SUMMARY

Professor Shashikala Gurpur is the Director of Symbiosis Law School Pune since 2007. This Law School is consistently ranked among top ten law schools in India in last 13 years. It has a comprehensive, research-focused legal education agenda with an annual turn-over of around Rupees 70 million with 1800 full-time undergraduate students, 70 post graduate students, 40 doctoral and about 600 part-time students. The success of this law school caused its replication in NOIDA in 2010, Hyderabad in 2014 and now on the anvil in Nagpur –to all of which Professor Gurpur had provided academic vision, planning and quality framework.

Professor Gurpur's public service commitment is evident in constant engagement with government at the Law Commission of India, resources to National Women's Commission, to the Judicial Academy and to governance at the provincial and national level. In addition, she has been constantly providing service and support to community service through extension programs. Her wide network across India and abroad is visible in professional memberships and participation. She has successfully worked in cross-cultural teams in her stints at UAE and Ireland.

Further, she has immensely contributed to professional community through expertise and research by inspiring generations of students, strong body of academics and social reform through legal literacy and justice work interventions. She developed robust internationalization activities facilitating exchanges and long term cross-border knowledge-sharing with institutes from across all continents of the world in the challenging area of legal education.

Her efforts at legal education and service to justice, beyond the rural upbringing in a farming family and being the first woman graduate in the family- are greeted with several awards, recognition and leadership roles conferred in India and abroad.
